GREEK GRAPE VARIETIES

Greece is known for its diverse range of indigenous wild grape varieties, many of which cannot be found anywhere else in the world.

These grapes have adapted to the Greek climate and soil over millennia and the country's winemakers are continuously exploring the potential of these varieties resulting in an exciting and vibrant wine scene throughout the islands.

To follow you will find just a few examples of what you can find in our list:

Assyrtiko: Santorini and in the Cyclades Islands. A white grape known for its mineral character and crisp acidity producing clean citrusy and perfectly balanced wines.

Malagousia: Drama and Macedonia. Almost extinct it was rediscovered in recent years, yielding medium-bodied tropical white wines with delicate floral notes.

Robola: Cephalonia, Ionian Islands. White variety that produces energetic and refreshing wines. Light-bodied with a zesty, crisp and clean finish.

Vidiano: a rare white grape from the island of Crete, offering up a stylish, textural white with depth. Like other white grapes revived from near extinction (think Arneis, Viognier), Vidiano is a tricky variety that doesn't produce big crops.

Moschofilero: Peloponnese, Mantinia. It's a highly aromatic grape variety. The wines are refreshing, lively and often they have a hint of spiciness.

Savatiano: Attica, Central Greece. Grape used in the production of Retsina, a traditional Greek wine flavoured with pine resin. Savatiano on its own displays an energetic citrus characteristic with a dry crispness to finish.

Agiorgitiko: Nemea, Peloponnese. Also known as St. George is a red variety that produces smooth, velvety medium-bodied wines with berries and vanilla subtleties.

Mavrodaphne: An opaque red from the Peloponnese often showing characteristics of red fruits as well as complex notes of coffee, caramel, raisins, chocolate, and plums.

Xinomavro: Naoussa, Macedonia. Red grape variety considered to be the Greek Nebbiolo. It produces wines with firm tannins, complex flavours known for its aging potential.

Mandilaria: A red grape variety that is grown throughout the Greek Isles. The grape is often used as a blending component showing characteristics of spice and deep floral notes producing deeply colored wines that are light bodied.

Limnio: Limnos, Northern Aegean. One of the oldest red varieties, it produces medium-bodied well structured wines with moderate tannins, red fruit and earthy notes.
